

Winegrowing Heuvelland

Foreword Vintage Heuvelland

Heuvelland is a recognised wine region. This means that the wines produced by our local vineyards are strictly controlled. If these controls confirm the quality of the wine, they are awarded an 'appellation contrôlée' quality label. Since 2005, BOB Heuvelland wine has been a controlled and protected designation of origin. You can now find vineyards in seven of Heuvelland's eight villages.

Vintage Heuvelland vzw groups together 20 wineries from the Westhoek district, three of which - Domaine La Bicoque, Reyngaard and 't Zwaluwnest - are non-commercial. Half a dozen of the well-established vineyards continue to expand significantly. Five new winegrowers have recently opened their vineyards. Heuvelland is now home to 10 % of the total area in Belgium planted up with vines, good for 200,000 bottles each year. These vineyards currently cover of some 60 hectares of countryside.

Heuvelland is the top destination for oenotourism in Belgium. Wine-making is important not only for the local economy, but also for the tourist sector. Just as importantly, the production of Heuvelland wine is sustainable. Many local restaurants and other catering outlets have Heuvelland vintages on their wine list. Regional products are also widely available at local festivals and fairs. Several of the vineyards are delighted to welcome visitors and there are a variety of possibilities for overnight stays.

More and more grapes for fine wine are also being grown in the wider vicinity of Heuvelland. Vintage Heuvelland now has members in Wervik, Zonnebeke and Bas-Warneton. What's more, many of the local vintners also produce various subsidiary products. Belgian winegrowing is booming and the Westhoek is one of the most important players. In addition to fresh, aromatic and dry white wine, the region also produces sparkling wines, made according to the méthode traditionnelle. The local red wines are also highly appreciated.

The secret of the terroir

Since 1990, the Province of West Flanders has made significant efforts to convert the area around the Kemmelberg (Mount Kemmel) from classic agriculture to more 'green' forms of cultivation. Climate and soil research revealed that the possibilities for fruitgrowing in Heuvelland were good. This resulted in the planting of the first vines on the Monteborg in 1996.

The rolling nature of the countryside and the proximity of the North Sea are both positive elements for our terroir. The 'mountains' of Heuvelland (which are really hills: the name Heuvelland means 'hill country') and the orientation of their slopes provide maximum sunlight and good drainage. Many vineyards are also protected by neighbouring areas of woodland. To make good wine, the vines need a dry, thin soil. This can be found in abundance in Heuvelland: the poor sand-loam ground is well drained, thanks to the presence of ironstone. When near the surface, this ironstone - known locally as bergstenen or 'mountain stones' - also has the advantage of generating extra heat in sunny weather. This creates a warm microclimate, which helps to stimulate the ripening of the grapes.

Thanks to the cool climate, with chilly nights and a long ripening period, Heuvelland wines are famed for their fresh and aromatic character.

Sustainable viticulture

Consumers are becoming increasingly more aware and knowledgeable about what they eat and drink. The issue of sustainability is now at the top of the political agenda. The Municipality of Heuvelland, Inagro, Syntra West, PC Fruit and Vintage Heuvelland also wish to encourage our region's winegrowers to use sustainable practices. The European 'Leader' subsidy programme provides financial resources for precisely this purpose. In exchange, we are in the process of developing a vision for the introduction of sustainable viticulture in Heuvelland and the Westhoek. Step by step, this strategy will be adjusted to suit the specific nature and needs of each individual vineyard. We intend to create a learning network, which will allow expertise to be generated, collected and shared. Whether the methods used are rational, organic or biodynamic, the improvement of the production practices used by the winegrowers is central. Classically maintained vineyards and traditional vinification processes can also make use of sustainable methods. Our common objectives are: to reduce the size of the ecological footprint; to increase biodiversity; to achieve greater public awareness and support; to devote continued and increased attention to the production of quality wines. Concrete actions include: the testing of hoeing machines to remove unwanted weed growth mechanically; the optimisation of the use of sprayers and chemicals; the mapping out of the soil profile using a soil scan; the testing and comparison of local weather stations with specific data that will allow less and more selective spraying; the promotion of Vintage Heuvelland wine ambassadors; investment in water purification systems and the reduction of energy use; experimentation with floral meadows; the training of wine guides; the organisation of wine-tastings; the further professional development of Heuvelland's winegrowers. In this way, we can work together to create sustainable viticulture in the Westhoek. By exchanging their knowledge and experience, our vintners can learn from each other how to do things better, constantly searching for the methods that will lead towards a healthier future for us all.

With thanks to the Municipality of Heuvelland, Inagro, Syntra West and PC Fruit for their support of this forward-looking project.

The regional product: Heuvelland wine

Heuvelland is a recognized winegrowing area. This means that the wine produced by various growers on the flanks of the Kemmelberg, the Rodeberg (Red Mountain) and the region's other hills and slopes are rigorously inspected and checked. If they meet the required standards, they are awarded an 'appellation contrôlée' label of quality. Heuvelland wine is therefore a closely controlled wine with a protected designation of origin.

Appellation d'Origine Protégée (AOP) - or in Dutch Beschermde Oorsprongs Benaming (BOB) - is a form of control designed to ensure the quality of the wine. In Heuvelland, high quality viticulture is clearly possible (see further under 'authentic characteristics'). Each year, an inspector from the 'general management of economic inspection of the federal government service economy, SME, middle class and energy' takes samples from various vats before the wine can be bottled. These samples undergo analytical and organoleptic tests (i.e. via the senses) in the recognition committee. As soon as the wines have been approved, they can be bottled with the BOB label.

a|. Vintage Heuvelland Ambassadors

Vintage Heuvelland Ambassadors are restaurateurs, every one of them a top professional, who each in their own unique and passionate way work with wines from the Westhoek. Their wine lists and menu cards make clear that they have no hesitation in recommending to you the many fine wines made in our region. Also by the glass.

c|. Regional products with Heuvelland wine

Fine de Heuvelland or Vintje

A distillate of grape juice is a fine. With this joint project, the members of Vintage Heuvelland VZW wanted to create a regional product that was made on the basis of residual flows from all wine growers. The name refers to vin (= French for wine), vintage (= vzw Vintage Heuvelland) and fine (= distillate from grape juice).

The residual product was distilled at La Distillerie de Biercée in Thuin and immediately returned to Heuvelland. The Vintje was aged in oak barrels in Heuvelland for at least 16 months and bottled in the Westhoek. The distillate received recognition as a 100% West Flemish regional product!

Vintje is available at various winemakers of Vintage Heuvelland vzw and in various local shops.

Regional products with Heuvelland wine

Vintage paté

The Vintage paté is an 'old-fashioned' paté produced by Stijn and Stefanie from the traditional farm butchery 't Lindebos in Wijtschate. The paté has a sweet touch so that the taste is similar to the taste of a wild paté. This is enriched with Vintje, a distillate of grape juice (more information can be found on the previous page) and ground raisins. The Vintage paté is available at: farm butchery 't Lindebos, various winemakers of Vintage Heuvelland vzw and visitors' centre 'Het Heuvelland'.

Heuvellandse bergstenen & Silex

Chocolatier Olivier Verledens from Loker had the bright idea to make a chocolate version of the 'mountain stones' that litter the slopes of Heuvelland. Using milk chocolate, a layer of pure cacao and Pommelle from the Monteberg Estate, he created his celebrated bergstenen. The cacao gives the typical rust-brown colour of the ironstone, while the Pommelle reminds us of the sand quarries of the past and the viticulture for which Heuvelland is now rightly famous.

Olivier's latest creation 'Silex' is a praline based on milk chocolate flavored with Eau de vin, from the wine domain Entre-Deux-Monts. The praline is finished with pieces of caramelized hazelnuts in the chocolate that provide a crispy result..

Wine estates to visit

a|. Monteberg Estate | Ward & Katrien Six | Dranouter

In 1996, some 600 vines were planted on the southern slopes of the Monteberg and the Kemmelberg as a trial to see if the region and its terroir were suitable for wine-growing. It quickly became clear that wine-making activities had a bright future in Heuvelland. Today Monteberg Estate has an area of 10 hectares with 48,000 vines. In all expansions they have always worked towards the goal to make a wide range of wines. With the up to now 11 different varieties, everyone finds their preference in the 'Monteberg' range. A soil rich in ironstone, a location protected by neighbouring woods to the north and well-drained southfacing slopes all help to ensure that this is ideal winegrowing land.

c|. Koudekot Estate | Peter Dael | Dranouter

Koudekot has three different types of grape, all blue varieties that share the common characteristic of early ripening. This is essential for the making of high quality still wines in a northern climate. In addition to red and rosé, with two of these varieties it is also possible to make white wine; namely, the Blanc de Bleu from the Blauer Zweigelt and the Blanc de Noir from the Frühburgunder, which used to be known as Pinot Noir. Nouterbaar, a regional product based on apples, is another Koudekot speciality. The constant striving for top quality, combined a never-ending search for the right balance between bio-cultivation and traditional cultivation techniques in the battle against plant diseases, means the need to accept lower yields. As a result, the supply of Koudekot wines is limited.

d|. d'Hellekapelle Estate | Michel Dehem | Loker

Michel of d'Hellekapelle planted his first vines near the Kauwackers in 2009: 3,000 plants, split between the Chardonnay and Pinot Noir varieties. Nowadays, he has more than 9,000 vines to care for.

An enthusiastic Michel guides you around his vineyard, wine cellar and vinification area. At the end of your visit, you can sample some of the fine d'Hellekapelle wines: naturally vinified and sometimes matured in French oak barrels. ## e|. Wijngoed Reyngaard | Jan & Mieke Reynaert | Dranouter

Wine has always fascinated the winemakers of the Reyngaard vineyard. After some years of experience helping to harvest grapes in Heuvelland, they asked themselves whether or not they might be able to make good quality wine of their own. Contact with other local winegrowers persuaded them that this was possible, providing they chose the right grape varieties and rootstocks.

They started their wine adventure in 2012 - in their back garden! They now run a micro-winery with a limited production. They are the smallest producers in Heuvelland but are proud of what they have achieved. They enjoy the production process and strive to make wine of the best possible quality. The Reyngaard Vineyard makes red and rosé wines from Regent grapes. The white wine is made from Pinot Auxerrois blanc and Pinot gris.

f|. Cense de l'Alouette | Jan & Lieve Staelens-Haezebrouck | Nieuwkerke

The name 'Cense de l'Alouette' appeared on the Ferraris maps of 1771. The ridge is part of the Tielt Formation, a dune mound that was formed around 50 million years ago. Lying in the shadow of the Kemmelberg, it overlooks the river Douve to the north and Lei Valley to the south. The vineyard was planted by the Staelens family in 2018. Qualified winegrower and winemaker Jan Staelens is passionately committed to the work that goes into producing his distinctive wines. Overlooking Northern France (Lille, Armentières, Bailleul), the southern slope is ideal for the particular range of red, white and sparkling wines produced under the 'PDO Heuvelland' label*. The vines stand on a superb terroir of sandy loamy soil and ironstone, typical of the Heuvelland region. Work will be undertaken in the coming years on developing the location into a wine and geology-themed viewpoint and meeting point for hikers and cyclists.

g|. Klein Rijselhoek Estate | Peter Vandamme | Loker

After first planting a trial vineyard, in 2009 Peter Vandamme was able to start as a wine-grower in the Heuvelland BOB region. His 1-hectare plot is situated at the foot of the Rodeberg on a steep slope. The soil is a mixture of clay, loam and ironstone, which is ideal for growing vines. He opted for fungus-resistant varieties: Regent, Cabernet Cortis and, more recently, Sauvignier Gris. The vineyard is also home to a kestrel, who lives in a specially adapted nest box. This useful 'lodger' helps to protect the vines against rodents, which damage both the roots and stems of the vines. Other birds that have an appetite for ripening grapes are also kept at a safe distance. This all goes to make the Klein Rijselhoek an environmentally-friendly and sustainable vineyard.

h|. Neuve-Eglise Estate | Frederik Debruyne | Nieuwkerke

The small domain that planted its first half hectare in 2016 with a first expansion to 0.8 ha in 2019 is located on the southern flanks of Nieuwkerke. With high plant densities and low yields, only a very high quality is pursued. At the moment, mainly Pinot Noir is planted, followed by Chardonnay and to a lesser extent Pinot Gris and Pinot Blanc. In the long run, the focus will be entirely on Pinot Noir and Chardonnay. Further expansions will be along the same lines. By working hard in the vineyard with nature, this line is also extended in the cellar. There is no striving to make natural wines, but wines that are made as naturally as possible. All wines are aged in wood.

I|. Ravenstein Estate | Dirk & Patricia Talpe-Lenoir | Wervik

Ravenstein is a former glory. In 1450 it was under the management of Adolf van Kleef, lord of Ravenstein and Wijnendale. Ravenstein Estate started in 2017, with the planting of 2.5 ha of vineyard, under the management of Dirk Talpe and Patricia Lenoir.

The vineyard is located on the southern flanks of the Amerikaberg in Kruiseke-Wervik, where the grapes can reach full maturity. The soil is sandy loam with in the deeper layers of clay and a silex layer, which ensure the minerality in the wines. Dirk and Patricia wish to develop the vineyard in an ecological and sustainable way, as they already do with their plant nursery. The soil is cut and shredded so that no soil herbicides are to be used, and mixed hedges provide a shelter for natural attackers of harmful insects.

To receive groups, an old barn was converted into a tasting room on the farm. Dirk himself is responsible for a passionate tour for visiting groups.

|. Heerlyckheyt Roonen Bergh (from 2022) | Simon Riquiere | Westouter

This domain, started in 2020, is situated on the slopes of the Rodeberg hill and has a typical ironstone and sandy loam soil. The ironstone holds warmth in the ground and helps the grapes to ripen. The sandy loam is fertile, moisture-retentive and rootable, so that it is easy to work. The slope of the land ensures good drainage, while the surrounding woodland creates an ideal micro-climate. The unique composition of the soil and the unique qualities of the location together form a terroir that is perfect for the planting of vines and the vinification of fine wines. The vineyard is planted exclusively with classic French varieties of grape: Chardonnay, Auxerrois, Pinot Blanc, Pinot Noir, Pinot Meunier and even Sauvignon Blanc, the latter being a variety that is found nowhere else in Heuvelland. In the near future, the domain will have some 11,500 vines, which will be increased to 20,000 in due course.

De Heerlyckheyt has a multi-functional hall with space for up to 100 people and a holiday home that can accommodate 14 guests. Both the hall and the home have breath-taking views over the vineyard.

- » Recently planted: 4 ha: 11,500 vines (2020+2021) + 5,250 vines (2022) + 3,250 (2023)
- » Grape varieties: Chardonnay, Auxerrois, Pinot Blanc, Pinot Noir, Pinot Meunier and Sauvignon Blanc

b|. Heuvelland Wine Festival | 15 august

What began in 2007 as a modest tasting with just four local wine-makers, has since developed to become a fun summer activity with 11 wine-makers and a number of other stands with local delicacies, fun entertainments for the kids and music, all contributing to a warm and welcoming atmosphere.

The formula is classic, but still popular and effective. At the entrance you pay a modest fee to buy a unique festival glass. At the same time, you get a number of vouchers to exchange for wine at all the different stands.

But there is more than that! In contrast to commercial wine tastings, here the wine is poured by the wine-makers themselves. In other words, you get first-hand information straight from the grapevine and - if still possible, given the growing number of visitors each year - can ask all the questions you like.

Come and enjoy this great festival, which takes place on 15 August (11.00-18.00) in the grounds of the Warande Castle in Kemmel, in the heart of fabulous Heuvelland. If you would like to make your visit even more memorable, you can reserve a picnic consisting exclusively of 100% regional products. This will be waiting for you at lunchtime on the festival's large terrace. Admission to the castle grounds for non-wine drinkers is free, where you can wander to your heart's content and discover more of Heuvelland's delicious regional products.
